For second year in a row, One-quarter of Fairfield and Woods attorneys named to 2010 Super Lawyer list

Denver, Colo. (March 11, 2010) – Fairfield and Woods, P.C., a mid-size, full-service law firm, announced today that 11 of their lawyers were named to the Colorado Super Lawyers List. This group puts one-quarter of the firm's attorneys on this prestigious list, and represents all areas of the firm's full-service practice, including both established directors and new rising stars.

Comprehensive Corporate Business Experience Recognized

- Caroline C. Fuller is the firm's managing director and has expertise in commercial bankruptcy, receivership, and out-of-court debt restructuring. She is currently handling one of the region's highest-profile retail reorganizations.
- Robert L. Loeb, Jr. is a corporate attorney who works extensively with entrepreneurs and owners of closely-held businesses.
- Constance D. Smith is an ACTEC Fellow who recently joined the firm and specializes in lifetime and testamentary wealth transfers, tax and business succession planning.

Litigation Excellence Acknowledged

- Craig D. Joyce heads the firm's litigation department and received the 2008 DU Law Stars Outstanding Alumni Award. His practice covers all aspects of civil litigation, with specific expertise in real estate litigation.
- Charles F. Brega is one of Colorado's pre-eminent litigation attorneys and has tried more than 400 civil and criminal cases in more than 20 states.
- Brent T. Johnson has 20 plus years in providing counsel and representation in employment and employment litigation. He has written extensively on the subject with his articles published by many esteemed publications.
